The Sewing Machine from 1910 in 1800s and 1900s

On a field trip to the Center for Sacramento History was definitely amazing and interesting. We learned about very fun artifacts and played fun activities, but I enjoyed looking at the real artifacts the most! If I had to choose, though, I'd pick the Sewing Machine from the year of 1918. I think that is a very nice artifact because I want to be a fashion designer when I grow up and it shows how the kids worked and played with either clothes or anything that involves with cloth. When I was at the "archives" I was very fond of the employees that work there, too. They were definitely great and very understanding with explaining the games and about the artifacts. I wish to come again and learn more about the toy sewing machine and again see the great workers. That was a great field trip to the Center for Sacramento History and as I say again I → wish to come again sometime over the summer break!
