City of Sacramento Offers Free Class to Help Customers Use Water Wisely

WHO/ WHAT:

The City of Sacramento Department of Utilities is presenting a FREE workshop to help customers use water wisely. Taught by certified Water Conservation Specialists, the workshop will review the updated Water Conservation Ordinance, which took effect June 12, and provide tips for creating a water wise landscape.

WHEN/ WHERE:

Saturday, July 25, 2009
10 a.m.-Noon
City of Sacramento Water Conservation Office
2260 Glen Ellen Circle
Sacramento, CA 95822

WHY:

The City of Sacramento is committed to helping customers use water wisely. The City also believes that educating its residents about City Codes helps to limit confusion and limits violations of the ordinances. The workshop will help residents find ways to have water efficient landscapes while staying within City codes for watering.

Spanish language interpretation is available and can be requested by calling 311.

WHAT PARTICIPANTS ARE SAYING...about the first workshop on June 27:

"An exceptionally well presented workshop with timely and useful information...I appreciated the hands on teaching of the different sprinklers and equipment to save water."

"[The presenter] was not only full of good information but also presented that information in a casual yet authoritative manner."

"I am glad I came, as the presentation was not redundant [and included] updates on rebates, variance procedures and new landscape watering tools."

"Meeting was great! Good information on leaks and what they cost."
