Plaza Park/CBD Historic District

The Plaza Park/Central Business Historic District represents the core of Sacramento's business district with a particular focus on the era between 1910 and 1930. Of additional importance is the age of some of the structures which date back to very early commercial development of the City, when J Street was one of the major transportation routes to the northern gold fields. Basements and sidewalk beneath many of the buildings along J street is evidence, in the form of empty space, of the original structures built prior to the raising of the streets. Many alleys in this area still retain their cobblestone paving. A number of the sidewalks in the area have their original curbstones.
